In 1994, Rwanda was torn apart by a genocide that killed over 800,000 people. Tariq Thachil, a Rwandan-American journalist, was just a child when the genocide happened. His family was targeted by the killers, and he lost many of his loved ones. In his new book, Cry My Beloved Country, Thachil tells the story of his family and friends who were killed in the genocide, and the aftermath of the tragedy.

Cry My Beloved Country is a powerful and moving account of the Rwandan genocide. Thachil writes with a raw honesty about the horrors that he witnessed, and the pain that he has carried with him ever since. He also tells the story of the survivors of the genocide, and the resilience that they have shown in the face of such adversity.

Cry My Beloved Country is a must-read for anyone who wants to understand the horrors of genocide and the importance of speaking out against injustice. It is a powerful reminder of the fragility of human life, and the importance of compassion and empathy.
