The book is divided into four sections, each focusing on a different aspect of the disco era. The first section, "The Pioneers," features interviews with some of the first disco stars, including Donna Summer, Gloria Gaynor, and Chic. The second section, "The Superstars," features interviews with some of the biggest disco stars of all time, including Diana Ross, Barry White, and the Bee Gees. The third section, "The One-Hit Wonders," features interviews with some of the disco stars who had only one major hit, including A Taste of Honey, Lipps Inc., and Silver Convention. The fourth section, "The Legacy," features interviews with some of the disco stars who have continued to be successful in the years since the disco era, including Madonna, Nile Rodgers, and Giorgio Moroder.

The book is full of fascinating stories and insights from some of the biggest stars of the disco era. It's a must-read for any fan of disco music.

Here are a few excerpts from the book:

"I was just a kid when I started singing disco," says Donna Summer. "I didn't know what I was getting myself into, but I loved the music. I just wanted to dance and have fun."

"Disco was the soundtrack of my life," says Gloria Gaynor. "It was the music that made me feel alive. I loved the energy and the excitement. It was a time of great change and liberation, and disco music was a part of that."

"The Bee Gees were the biggest band in the world," says Barry Gibb. "We were selling out stadiums and making millions of dollars. It was an incredible time. We were living the dream."

"Disco was a magical time," says Nile Rodgers. "It was a time when people came together to celebrate life and music. It was a time of love and peace. I'm so grateful that I was a part of it."
