

No One Can Stem The Tide: Selected Poems 1931-1991

A Poetic Journey Through Time and Emotion

No One Can Stem the Tide is the definitive collection of poems from one of the most acclaimed and influential poets of the 20th century. This volume spans six decades of writing, from the early, experimental work of the 1930s to the mature, meditative poems of the 1980s.

In these poems, we encounter a wide range of themes and emotions. There are love poems, nature poems, political poems, and religious poems. There are poems of joy, sorrow, anger, and hope. Throughout, we hear the voice of a poet who is deeply engaged with the world around him and who is constantly wrestling with the big questions of life.
