Eleanor's secret passion for sewing leads her to seek refuge in Sophie's humble dress shop, where she discovers a world she never imagined.

Joining their unlikely partnership are two other remarkable women: Gertrude Blum, a Holocaust survivor who finds solace in the rhythm of her sewing machine, and Jolene O'Connell, a young Irish immigrant with a keen eye for detail and a heart filled with dreams. Together, these four women form an unbreakable bond, sharing their triumphs and heartbreaks, their laughter and tears.
